Stimulus Text:

The following excerpts are from the speech delivered by President John F. Kennedy for his inauguration on January 20, 1961. This speech was delivered during the heart of the Cold War while there was significant tension over the nuclear arms race between the United States and the former Soviet Union. Read the excerpts and then answer the question that follows.

1961 Inaugural Address
by President John F. Kennedy

Vice President Johnson, Mr. Speaker, Mr. Chief Justice, President Eisenhower, Vice President Nixon, President Truman, reverend clergy, fellow citizens: We observe today not a victory of party, but a celebration of freedom—symbolizing an end, as well as a beginning—signifying renewal, as well as change. ...

Let every nation know, whether it wishes us well or ill, that we shall pay any price, bear any burden, meet any hardship, support any friend, oppose any foe, to assure the survival and the success of liberty.

This much we pledge—and more.

To those old allies whose cultural and spiritual origins we share, we pledge the loyalty of faithful friends. United there is little we cannot do in a host of cooperative ventures. Divided there is little we can do—for we dare not meet a powerful challenge at odds and split asunder.

To those new states whom we welcome to the ranks of the free, we pledge our word that one form of colonial control shall not have passed away merely to be replaced by a far more iron tyranny. We shall not always expect to find them supporting our view. But we shall always hope to find them strongly supporting their own freedom—and to remember that, in the past, those who foolishly sought power by riding the back of the tiger ended up inside. . . .

Finally, to those nations who would make themselves our adversary, we offer not a pledge but a request: that both sides begin anew the quest for peace, before the dark powers of destruction unleashed by science engulf all humanity in planned or accidental self-destruction.

So let us begin anew—remembering on both sides that civility is not a sign of weakness, and sincerity is always subject to proof. Let us never negotiate out of fear, but let us never fear to negotiate.

Let both sides explore what problems unite us instead of belaboring those problems which divide us.

Let both sides, for the first time, formulate serious and precise proposals for the inspection and control of arms, and bring the absolute power to destroy other nations under the absolute control of all nations.

Let both sides seek to invoke the wonders of science instead of its terrors. Together let us explore the stars, conquer the deserts, eradicate disease, tap the ocean depths, and encourage the arts and commerce.

In the long history of the world, only a few generations have been granted the role of defending freedom in its hour of maximum danger. I do not shrink from this responsibility—I welcome it. I do not believe that any of us would exchange places with any other people or any other generation. The energy, the faith, the devotion which we bring to this endeavor will light our country and all who serve it. And the glow from that fire can truly light the world.

And so, my fellow Americans, ask not what your country can do for you; ask what you can do for your country.

My fellow citizens of the world, ask not what America will do for you, but what together we can do for the freedom of man.

Finally, whether you are citizens of America or citizens of the world, ask of us here the same high standards of strength and sacrifice which we ask of you.

Item Stem:

One of the most significant themes in President Kennedy's speech is the importance of international collaboration. Click on the highlighted portions of the speech that directly support this conclusion.

Distractor Analysis:

1st highlighted section: While there are many people acknowledged in President Kennedy's address, this section does not refer to collaboration or working together.

2nd highlighted section—KEY: This sentence affirms Kennedy's belief in the power of nations and allies working together to accomplish goals.

3rd highlighted section: Although Kennedy issues a statement about several nations who have recently won their freedom, his statement does not center on teamwork with them.

4th highlighted section—KEY: Kennedy's call for negotiation provides evidence that he is stressing teamwork and collaboration in this speech.

5th highlighted section—KEY: Kennedy's statement about nations working together to accomplish several types of goals supports the theme of collaboration.

6th highlighted section—KEY: Kennedy ends his speech with a call to all humanity to work together to achieve and maintain freedom.
